As individuals, we all have an opinion of what we value about Britain and within our lives.

As you can see, there is a wide range of values that individuals have identified

Values differ from person to person but many are the same or similar.

Write down your own values. This can be in your personal life and/or your work life

Compare your list to your family and friends and give 3 examples why they are either the same or similar.

E.g. Social Life– Enjoys the same music

We have looked at personal values but what about our countries values? These are known as “British Values”.

These come under five headings:

- Democracy
- Individual Liberty
- The Rules of Law
- Mutual Respect
- Tolerance of those of different faiths and beliefs

Democracy

Britain is a democracy. This means that people in Britain elect representatives, by means of voting, who will then create and manage the laws of the country and thus govern it.

If we didn't have a democracy, an individual could make all the laws which could then be abused to further the agenda of that individual and may not reflect the will of the people.

The Houses of Parliament

This is where those elected will debate on what is best for the country

Individual Liberty

This means we can choose to have our opinions, have freedom of speech and access to information.

The Rule of Law

In Britain we all have to abide by the laws in this country. The people working in the police force enforces these laws which helps to keep us safe.

Mutual Respect

This means that we respect other peoples values and beliefs and expect them to respect ours in return.

Tolerance of those with different faiths and beliefs

This means we will tolerate others who believe in faiths and beliefs that differ from our own.

Promoting our values

As British citizens, we need to promote our values wherever we can. As a training provider we promote these values by:

Democracy:

- Encouraging all learners to have a voice. E.g. completing surveys, reviews, debates, discussions, and conducting evaluations on our service.

Rule of Laws:

- Ensuring you're safe in your environment
- Keeping your personal information safe
- Having classroom boundaries
- Supporting learners with workplace issues
- Having a contract with you

Individual liberty:

- Celebrating achievements
  - Having a right to view documents relating to yourself
  - Helping you to make informed choices

- Mutual respect:

- We listen and often learn what individuals value and what their beliefs are
- Treat you with respect by being polite and professional at all times
- Having time to listen to any problems you may experience

- Tolerance of those with different faith and beliefs:

- Have a good understanding of your cultural and/or religious needs
- Providing a service that does not discriminate against anyone
- Support you in challenging prejudicial or discriminatory behaviour against you

To check your understanding please give examples on how you embed British values into your work life.
